We have quite recently written an art cle on the propriety of using all the manure which could be applied with increased profit, and we would prefer Steel, Cast, and Wrought Iron our readers to peruse that article in connection with this.

Let us suppose two farmers, each commencing at the same time with farms alike, in value, locality, etc.; the one putting down his farm to grass and grain with shallow plowing and elight manuring, at the rate of twenty or more acres per annum; the other, under-draining, sub-soiling, and fully fertelizing five acres per annum, and putting it down to similar crops; each spend the same amount of money in performing these operations. Follow these farmers for ten years, and we shall find the one with two hundred acres producing small crops of little value, requiring double expense, as compared with their quantity, in collecting them; the other with fifty acres producing very large crops, and requiring much less labor in their manipulation, harvesting, etc. Our friend with the two hundred acres has to cart his manures from long distances to slightly coat his land; the other, with fifty acres in full heart, has comparatively less distance for the carting of his manures, removal of tools from place to place, gathering in crops,

At the end of ten years the fifty acre farmer will be the richer; at the end of twenty he will have double the income of his neighbor; at the end of thirty. three times his income, and at the end of forty, four times. This is supposing that he uses no portion of his increased gains in accelerating the preparation of his land; but if instead of this, as he accumulates larger profits, he increases the five acres per annum, to be under-drained, sub-soil plowed, etc., to ten or more acres, or such quantity as increased wealth will permit, we shall find him at the end of the first fifteen years, enjoying four times the incomes of his less progressed neighbor. Similar results will rise in degree from the use of fertilizing materials, to the full extent that they are found to produce increased profits. The adag of the two hundred acre man probably will be, "I buy no more manure than will produce a crop;" that of the fifty acre man, "I use as much manure as will give an increased profit by its use."- No. 7. College: Street, Three If our friend of the fifty acres were located in South Carolina, he would probably follow the experiments of Mr. Lomes, which have clearly demonstrated that clover and grass may be grown in districts where there growth had previously been supposed to be impracticable, while our two hundred acre friend would have believed with his forefathers, that these experiments could not succeed .-Working Farmer.

The proprietor, in cathing the attention of the public to this preparation, does so with a feeting of the atmost confidence in its wirtues and adaptation to the diseases for which it is recommended.

It is no new and untried article, but one that has stood the test of a top years trial before the American people, and its reputation and sale are unrivaled by any similar preparations extant. The testimony in its lavor given by the most prominent and well-known physicians and individuals in all parts of the country is immence, and a care in persua of the Almanac, published annually by the proprietor, and to be had gratis of any of his Agents, cannot but satisfy the most skeptical that this remedy is really deserving the great celebrity it has obtained.

DR. HOOFLAND'S BALSAMIC CORDIAL,

Coughs, colds, influenza, croup hoarseness, branchitis, diseases of the bowels arising from cold, incipient consumption, and for the relief and (if at all possible) cure of patients in advanced stages of the latter disease.

Stages of the latter discuse.

Catarrh, or Common Cold, as it is familiarly called, is worthy of study, and serious enough to be avoided, if possible. Dr. lieb sa as "I will not say that Coldeare to our inia bitants what the Placer and Vermow Parkinger to those of other countries, but, ican ace confidently that they usine in disease of greater complicity and mortality than these latter."

In the danger of Haddenius and Parkmonia, which often follow in the train of a neglected cold, and in Parmars Plenoballs, the tubercolar irritation of which is developed by the same cause, we surely have proofand argument sufficient for affention, not only to the preventive means, but also to the curative ones of a disease, which however mild in its inception is directly ir indirectly productive of such diversified and alarming results. Cough sometimes proceed from a disordered or dyspeptic state of the stomach, in which case the German inters should be used. In cases of weakness, or general debility of the system, resulting from a postracted cough, the German litters will be found of great benefit.

In cases of accure inflamation of the Langs, the prominent symptoms generally arc—horries and painful respiration, injerifect arternalization of the blood, cough and expectoration, attended with exclusion of the heart, fever, various decapagements of the digestive and utilizing systems, production of strength, dec. a cure.

The terrible fatality of diseases resulting from a "common count" may be seen by a glace at the following statistics, taken from the records of the Board of Health of Bilatel plats, confessedly one of the most nealthy localities after Union:—

in the Union:

1852. Total destin in Philadelphia,
1912
1964 of Consumption,
1,912
1964 of Consumption,
1,913
1965 of Consumption,

From these figures it will be seen that meanly one sourti of the total deaths in the country are caused by consump-tion, to say nothing of the numerous other the excessiving ing from a "slight cold."
